PUBLICITY DRAWS RECORD CROWD TO ANTIOCH LAKES

Booth at the Travel Show Draws Attention to Region

Big fish, publicity in Chicago newspapers, and advertising at the Chicago Daily News Travel Show last week combined to bring a record crowd of resorters and fishermen to the Antioch chain of lakes over the week-end. Resorts were full and fishing boats were a sell-out at nearby lakes. The crowd throughout the region is reported to be the largest in the history of local resorts for May 1.

Big Fish Lures Anglers

Many of the anglers visiting here Sunday were inspired to try their luck in the local lakes after taking one longing look at the photograph of a fine 17 inch specimen of a crappie displayed at the Chain o'Lakes booth at the travel show. There he was, the daddy of all crappies, weighing 3 lbs. and 1 oz., also the photograph of his proud captor, W. R. Valters, of 5629 N. Harlem avenue, Chicago. Valters hooked the big fish at Indian Point the previous Sunday, but "crappie" missed the travel show because he was in the hands of a taxidermist. But his picture seemed trill enough.

Lions Sponsor Booth

Leading the move to publicize the lakes region at the show was the Antioch Lions club, which is also co-operating in the newspaper advertising program. Local Lion club members and interested citizens were in charge of the booth for the four days of the show.

Dr. D. N. Deering and Bill Brook assembled the exhibits and dressed the booth Wednesday, and at the opening Thursday President Ed Vos of the Lions club and Brook were in charge. Lew Van Patten and Dr. Deering talked it up for the home community on Friday and L. O. Bright and H. S. Roberts were in charge Saturday. Postmaster James Horan and Dr. Deering returned Sunday.

Need for Advertising

Local booth attendants handed out 15,000 folders of the region and talked to hundreds of visitors at the show. Rather close tabulation revealed that only one out of four Chicago people had any definite knowledge of the lakes around Antioch, and that even a fewer number had ever visited this community. This refutes the idea held by many local people that "all Chicago knows about the lake region." There are over six million people in the metropolitan area—certainly a rich field for advertising our vacation facilities.

Public is Invited To Veterans' Hospital

The public is invited to visit the Veterans Administration hospital No. 105 just west of North Chicago on Hospital day, Thursday, May 12, the Antioch Unit of the American Legion Auxiliary announced this week. Guards will conduct inspection tours through the grounds and tea will be served from 2 to 4 by women of the Tenth District.

The Antioch Unit announces that three cars will drive to the hospital that day and anyone wishing to visit this very modern hospital is welcome to go. Mrs. John Horan, rehabilitation chairman, is driving, as are also Mrs. Paul Chase and Mrs. W. W. Ward. Anyone wishing to go should telephone any of these three.

Antioch Teacher Speaks at Mother-Daughter Banquets

"Modern Daughters" was the subject of an address given by Miss Cornelia Roberts at the Mother and Daughter banquet at the Bristol Methodist church Tuesday night. More than 150 attended. Last night Miss Roberts spoke at a similar event held in the Lake Villa M. E. church. Her subject was "The Youth Hostel Movement."

Demand for Miss Roberts' services as a speaker have been numerous during the past months, and despite the fact that her time is almost wholly employed at the Antioch Township High school where she is teacher of history and English, she had aways responded to these requests. In addition to her teaching she is dean of girls, and this year is class adviser to the seniors. Miss Roberts has found time to travel extensively, and she speaks entertainingly on a variety of subjects.

Resort Owners and Business Men to Be Guests of Lions

Resort owners, business men and interested citizens have been invited to attend the dinner-meeting of the Antioch Lions club to be held Monday night at 7 o'clock at Bill Karpen's Roundup, a mile south of town, to hear further details regarding the proposed prize fish contest, community publicity, and to hear the address of C. Edward Thorney, public relations officer of the Chicago North Shore railroad.

Thorney not only has a good knowledge of our own community, but also has information regarding scores of other communities that have "made good." His long experience as public relations officer and with the Chicagoland recreation bureau has taught him to know what it takes to put a community out in front. His remarks will be well worth hearing and his opinions may be regarded as expert.

Officials of the Lions club have stressed the importance of the meeting Monday night and the word has gone out to see that all who are interested in regional development have a personal invitation to attend, but it may be that some will be missed. However, the meeting is an open meeting and all are invited. The only provision is that all who plan to come to the dinner must notify the club secretary, Dr. D. N. Deering, before 10 a. m. Monday. The telephone number is Antioch 4 or 44.

TWO ARE RESCUED AS BOAT SWAMPS IN GRASS LAKE

Chicago Men Are Saved by Chas. Haling and P. Waldweiler

Two men were rescued from almost certain death in Grass Lake late Thursday when their boat swamped in the waves in mid-lake off Haling's landing. The men were Jake Dykstra and his brother-in-law, both of Chicago, and the rescuers were Charles Haling and Pete Waldweiler.

The men who had come out from Chicago, started across the lake in a boat that was heavily loaded with materials to be used in making repairs at the Dykstra cottage on the west side. Waves were running so high that watchers on the shore feared for the safety of the men in the boat and some one brought out a field glass to watch the progress of the overloaded boat. The expected happened, and soon both men were observed to be floundering about in the water, their boat swamped and the men having difficulty in keeping their footing in the four-foot water.

Haling and Waldweiler at once rushed to the rescue and found the men nearly exhausted when they reached the sunken boat. The men were taken to Haling's Resort where they were given dry clothes. After a night's rest there they seemed none the worse for their almost fatal adventure.

The experience recalled the nearly fatal adventure of Haling and Wildweiler 12 years ago when the pair were marooned for a whole night in ice cold water with only the remains of a shooting blind to cling to. More dead than alive, the men were rescued at dawn by searchers who had almost lost hope of ever seeing them alive again.

Farm Union Revolt Against Control of Acreage Spreading

A spreading revolt of Illinois farmers against A. A. A. acreage allotments was claimed by Fred Winterroth, secretary of Farmers' Union of Illinois.

A poll taken among approximately five hundred Kankakee county union members, Winterroth said, revealed an almost unanimous decision to ignore allotment notices. Not a single farmer voted to comply with the A. A. A. plan, he declared.

Winterroth announced similar polls will be taken in Ford, Hancock, Lee and Stephenson counties to determine farmers' sentiment in those areas.

Dirt farmers from ten western Illinois counties staged a protest meeting against the federal crop control bill at Macomb last Monday and adopted a resolution condemning corn allotments as "absolutely ruinous" to the farmer.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Wood visited Mr. and Mrs. Weichmann of Chicago on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Hawkins, Mrs. Anna Shreve and Charles Bates spent Sunday at Starved Rock.

ZONING BOARD TO HOLD HEARINGS IN TOWNSHIPS

Map Five Zones and Plan Permanent Ordinance for County

Preparatory to drafting a permanent ordinance for the county under the zoning plan, the Lake county zoning board will conduct public hearings in the 18 townships of the county, it was announced yesterday by John J. Hogan, chairman of the board.

Serving with Hogan on the zoning board are Thomas Wyles of Highland Park, Ray B. Dixon of Gurnee, Harold J. Tallott of North Chicago, David Van Patten of Wadsworth, Lloyd Graham of Barrington, and James Anderson, Jr., of Lake Forest.

It is understood that five districts have been set up for the county, but that the hearings in the various townships are to be held before the board brings its outline for the plan before the county board.

Revive Zoning Plan

The Lake county zoning proposal has had a somewhat hectic existence. A temporary ordinance was drawn up last August and a zoning board was named to draft a permanent code, but the whole matter was shelved at the October meeting of the supervisors. The move was later revived at the insistence of various municipalities and associations, and the county board approved the proposal with a limited appropriation.

The proposed zoning plan aims to restrict the use of unimproved land areas bordering highways in the county outside incorporated municipalities to prevent the spread of undesirable commercial enterprises, unsightly rubbish heaps, and as a safety factor would prevent the placing of signs or buildings that would obstruct the view of motorists.

LICENSE CUT WILL SAVE $200 A YEAR FOR AUTO OWNERS

Village Fathers Amend the Ordinance as Economy Measure

The enactment of an amendment to the vehicle licensing ordinance cutting the fee from $3.00 to $2.50 for pleasure automobiles and effecting a similar reduction for trucks, was one of the first acts of the village board Tuesday night at the first meeting of the fiscal year beginning May 1. The cutting of the license fees was purely an economy measure, board members explained, and according to Village Clerk R. L. Murrie, the measure will save approximately $200 for truck and auto owners in Antioch.

The new license rate schedule calls for a fee of $2.50 for pleasure cars up to seven-passenger size, and the same amount for trucks weighing up to 8,000 pounds. Trucks of larger size must pay $4.00 yearly. Vehicles operated by dealers under a dealer's license are chargeable to such dealer, and he shall pay $2.50 for the first dealer's license and the sum of one dollar for each additional dealer's license issued by the State of Illinois.

All vehicle licenses expire on the 30th day of April following the date of issuance, and when issued for a period of less than one year, the fee is to be pro-rated for the unexpired period of the year, but in no case is the amount to be less than one-fourth of the annual fee, according to the ordinance.

Due to the reduction in the fees, there will be no further cut for early buyers of the tags this year, as there was last year when the board sold the stickers, regularly selling at $3.00, for $2.00 to those who paid during the month of May.

The village license fee is due now, board members say, and all auto owners are urged to make their purchase of the 1938 tags immediately, so as to relieve village officials of a long drawn out period of collection.

FORUM TO HOLD MEETING FRIDAY

The last meeting of the High School Forum will be held Friday, May 6, at 8:30 o'clock P. M. Officers for the coming year will be elected. The program will be devoted to a discussion of the selection of subjects for next year. Parents of eighth grade students are particularly invited to be present so that they will be better able to advise their children.

GOOD BYE, BARREL!

DISTRICT PTA TO BE ANTIOCH GUEST MAY 17

Local Officials Prepare for Parent-Teacher Work-Shop Session

Mrs. Elmer Hunter, president of the Antioch Parent-Teacher association, other officers of the group, and Prin. R. E. Clabaugh, are making preparations to welcome those who will attend the special Parent-Teacher conference with school of instruction planned by leaders of the Distrcit 26 to be held at the Antioch grade school on May 17. The program will commence with registration at 9:30 o'clock and will continue throughout the day.

The principal speaker will be Otis Keeer, assistant superintendent of public instruction who will tell of the new standards for elementary schools.

Fine Program

What the parent-teacher association can do about the "Exceptional Child" will be discussed by Illinois Congress State Chairman, Mrs. H. W. Kibler, of Mendota, Illinois.

Mrs. Leonard H. Graf, Illinois Congress State Chairman, will meet with newly appointed Summer Round-Up Committees at luncheon.

Parent Education will be discussed by Mrs. Frederic L. Holch of Glen Ellyn, First Vice-president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Recreation, Miss M. Millikan, Lake County Federal Recreation Technician.

Greetings will be extended by County Superintendent of Schools of Lake County, Mr. W. C. Petty, by Mrs. Wiliam Zeigler, of Round Lake, President of the Lake County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, and Mrs. Elmer Hunter, President Antioch P. T. A.

Instructions to Officers and Committee Chairman.

P. T. A. Budgets—Prin. R. E. Clabaugh.

Drill in Parliamentary Procedure.

Offer Prizes

The Lake County Council is offering a prize for the best Publicity Scrap Book, and PTA members are invited to bring theirs as well as copies of past programs, and also be prepared to give to the Lake county program committee the names and addresses of outstanding speakers for the Lake County Speakers' Exchange list.

Parents and teachers also have a cordial invitation to hear Miss Margaret Wells Wood, of the Illinois department of health, in an address on Social Hygiene at the Central School, Libertyvile, in the evening of the same day, May 17, at 8 o'clock.

Arrange Other Meetings

The District Director has also arranged a special conference on "Humane Education" at Round Lake School, Friday evening, May 20th, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. W. F. Krehl of Chicago, State Chairman of Humane Education, I. C. P. T. will discuss "Substitutes for Toy Weapons", "Character Building Through Humane Education" and "Junior Humane Leagues."

All Congress Parent-Teacher Associations in this and neighboring districts are urged to attend these sessions. This Conference is another of the services furnished by the Illinois Congress for the assistance and benefit of all parents and teachers.

Officers and members of Community Clubs and Non-Congress units are invited to share in this worthwhile program.

PRIZE FISH TO BE RELEASED IN LAKES CHAIN NEAR ANTIOCH

Lions Club and Resorters Plan Richest Season for Anglers

A prize fish contest that promises to be "the berries" and the biggest of all prize fish contests in this locality, today had passed the stage of mere contemplation when Antioch Lions club members and prominent resort owners and citizens were working out plans for the program to include practically all of the lakes in this immediate locality.

Full cooperation was promised by the state department of conservation, according to Dr. D. N. Deering who talked to Thomas J. Lynch, acting director of the department, and with Thomas McCafferty, superintenent of the state fish hatchery at Spring Grove. The state will supply the prize fish that are to be tagged and planted in the local lakes, the officials said.

Organization of prize fish associations on the various lakes was being talked up today with every prospect of perfecting a plan for the biggest prize fish event ever seen in this part of the state. Details will be worked out within the next week and definite dates will be set for the start of the contest which is expected to last all summer, closing about October 1.

More details of the plan will probably be worked out and will be revealed Monday night at a meeting of the Antioch Lions club at the Roundup at 7 o'clock. Business men and resort owners have been invited to attend this meeting.

PARENTS, TEACHERS TO HOLD YEAR'S FINAL MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Mrs. T. Stephenson Speaker; Committees to Give Annual Reports

The Antioch Parent-Teacher association today announced plans and the program for the final meeting of the year to be held at the grade school Monday night.

The spaker is to be Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson, third vice president of the state congress of parents and teachers, and her subject will be "Summer Vacation and the Family."

A report of the annual convention of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers being held this week in Quincy will be given by Mrs. Elmer Hunter, president of the local group, who is attending as a delegate from Antioch. Other reports to be heard include those of Mrs. L. O. Bright, historian, and Mrs. Harry Radtke, chairman of the finance and budget committee.

Music and special entertainment numbers will be heard during the evening.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Henslee returned home Friday after a two weeks trip through Kansas. They visited friends at Sedan, Dexter, Wichita and Cedarvale, and also were guests of Mrs. Henslee's mother at Almena.

PRECINCTS TO BE RE-APPORTIONED BY COUNTY BOARD

Judge Issues Mandamus for Re-Apportionment for November Vote

An order instructing the Lake county board of supervisors to divide, adjust and re-apportion the large voting precincts in the county at their June meeting was issued Saturday by Judge Ralph D. Dady.

Although the board had proposed to act on the precinct problem on their own volition at the June meeting, the group of "interested citizens" who filed the petition for the writ against the board some months ago, now have the satisfaction of knowing that the court order makes the re-apportionment mandatory. The petitioners were represented by Attorney E. R. Parnass, while State's Attorney Charles E. Mason, representing the supervisors, said there were no objections to the order.

Affects 23 Precincts

Some 23 precincts which had more than 800 voters at the last general election in November, 1936, will either be split up or re-adjusted so that none of them will have more than 670 voters. The court order does not specify details as to the revision, which will be left to the supervisors. It is indicated that when the re-apportionment is effected there will be from 90 to 100 voting precincts instead of the existing 78.

Some of the larger precincts involved include Waukegan's 25 precincts which is expected to be increased to 30, and Deerfield's 12 will be split up into 16 or more voting districts. Cuba, perhaps the largest precinct in the county, now with a single voting place, will be made into two precincts. Shields is also slated for readjustment.

GANG WILL SHOOT IT OUT AT JIM'S PLACE SUNDAY P.M.

Crack Shots Will Resort to Arms to Settle Old Dispute

Now the sporting world is to have the "low down," it is to know the truth and an age-old dispute is to be settled—by fire-arms.

No, it's not a grudge battle—just a friendly rivalry as to who is the most skillful with firearms. The scene of the battle is to be Jim's Place at Grass Lake, and the time, 1 p. m. Sunday, May 8, and the affair has been labeled "Big Clay Bird Shoot." It started when the "North Slough Mallards" challenged the "Grass Lake Mudhens" to a shoot to determine once and for all time who the crack shots are in said territory.

Some of the notables expected to participate are Farmer Bill Yopp, president of the Mallards; McCarthy Hanrahan, jovial fisherman and proprietor of Jim's Place; Jim McMillen, farmer, wrestler, and Democratic aspirant for county treasurer; Louis Nielsen and Roy Engels, crack sheet shooters; Bill Brook, sports writer, banker and crow shooter; Ed Vos, president of Antioch Lions Club; Gus (Sure Shot) Yopp; Fat and Fritz, "the Gold-Dust Twins" of 4628 Greenview avenue, Chicago; and a variety of Toms, Dicks and Harrys too numerous to mention. Everybody is welcome, of course.

ANNOUNCE WINNERS IN POSTER CONTEST

Five schools were represented in the poppy poster contest this year, according to Mrs. E. C. Pitman, poppy chariman for the local unit of the American Legion Auxiliary, who supervised the contest at the Antioch Grade school Monday.

Winners in the first division were: 1st, Lucille Sherman, 2nd, Alice Fox of the Antioch school; and the second division winners were: Gertrude Yopp of Grass Lake school, first; and Edna Pedersen, of Hickory school, second.

Judges for this year's contest were Mrs. H. H. Riechers, Misses Cornelia Roberts and Mary Stanley. Winning posters will be entered in further contests, and have a chance of ultimately winning a national award.

Hippocrates Was Right

When he saw his friends sniffling from colds, and their brows weighted down by leaden headaches, wise old Hippocrates, father of medicine, advised one simple cure—rest. Today a study of the 1,667 Harvard students who spent a total of 70 years in Harvard's Stillman Infirmary during the past 31 months, suffering from colds and respiratory infections, has just been published. Physicians subjected all those ailing students to every recognized cure for colds, from drugs to vaccines. The results of the study indicated that, after 2,400 years, old Hippocrates still has the right answer. The only reliable, thoroughly beneficial cure was found to be—rest.

What's in a Man?

What's in a man? Well, to begin with, there's about a nickel's worth of iodine, forty quarts of water, and enough sulphur to kill the fleas on a small dog. There's phosphorus enough for a year's supply of matches, iron to make a small nail, and lime enough to whitewash a chicken coop. Break a man down on the scrapheap, and he's hardly worth a cent a pound.

But there's something more in a man, something that turns a chemical machine into a living being, something that makes that machine form the notes of a symphony, spell the words of a poem, and seek to unlock the doors to the treasures and mysteries of life.

What's in a man? There's love, hate, fear, revenge, lust, honor, hope, and despair. There's a force that makes him explore the unknown, and a fatality that sends him out to kill in the shot and shell of war.

In this day when the frontiers of the world dwindle under the push of knowledge, the frontiers of the human mind remain dim and distant, hidden secrets in the greatest drama of all.

What's in a man? Who knows! Kin of the gods and brother of the beasts, man remains the great unknown, the greatest of all mysteries.

* * * * *

If the present trend keeps up, in a few years more the heirs of the man who leaves an estate won't have to worry about the division. The tax collector will have taken care of everything in advance.

* * * * *

Now the administration is offering to lend money to the utilities. Somehow or other this reminds us of the old newspaper line, "The condemned man ate a hearty breakfast before being led to the scaffold."

Retribution in Sing-Sing

The man who once could borrow a million dollars on Wall St. is today just a number in New York's Sing Sing Prison. The man who was once a powerful force among the world of financiers is today digging ditches and raking the soil in the prison yard for five cents a day. For at least three years and four months his bedroom will be a four-by-seven-foot cell. Such is the fate of Richard Whitney, ex-governor and former president of New York's Stock Exchange, and such is the punishment exacted by the law for the securities he stole from his friends and associates. Should Whitney prove an exemplary prisoner, he may walk out of Sing Sing Prison a free man in 40 months. But never again will he be permitted to return to Wall St., the seat of his now shattered power. And never again will the runners, the clerks, the officials in the Exchange and brokerage houses, look up in awe and admiration if Richard Whitney passes by. He has lost his kingdom.

A Difference

It is asserted that the New Deal is where it started in 1933. But the country isn't. It owes seventeen billion dollars more.

* * * * *

How Times Change!

We grow old. We can remember when a bumper crop meant prosperity. Now it means poverty.

In Nero's Favor

While Rome burned Nero may have fiddled, but he didn't waste time lecturing the rest of the world on what it should or should not do.

"Reform before recovery" has been the slogan of many New Deal proponents. Now it would seem that recession comes before both of them.

* * * * *

If George Washington were alive now he might prove to us whether he could throw sixty cents across the Potomac.

* * * * *

Under the new farm bill, we have a picture of the sturdy tiller of the soil saying, "Well, boys, we start threshing tomorrow on the advice of counsel."

* * * * *

We might as well become resigned to the inevitable: The administration is going to restore prosperity to us, even if it costs every cent we've got.

* * * * *

As a general thing, any country runs into trouble when the intellectuals take control away from the fundamentalists.

Senator Wheeler says the government sold lands in his state to Indians at 50 cents an acre and then paid them $1.50 an acre not to plant anything on it.

Lesson for May 8

CO-OPERATING IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:30-41.
GOLDEN TEXT—For he that is not against us is on our part.—Mark 9:40.
PRIMARY TOPIC—When We Want to Be First.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Not in Our Class.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Working with Others for Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Co-operating in Service.

That there is strength in united and co-operative effort is a truth so obvious that in the affairs of the home and of the office we would not attempt to make progress with "a house divided against itself." But with strange and destructive inconsistency some who are engaged in the propagation of the Christian faith, and often the very folk who speak much of love and fellowship and sacrificial service, fight one another with cunning and often bitterness of spirit, and all in the name of Christ whom they profess to serve.

No one who is awake to the real issue involved would ask any true believer to co-operate in Christian work with those who, while holding the name and outward symbols of the followers of Christ, deny His deity and His Word. But surely there is need for loving co-operation between all those who truly love the Lord, who believe in Him and in His Word.

I. A Dispute by the Way (vv. 30-34).

Jesus had taken His disciples from the Mount of Transfiguration by secluded roads through Galilee so that He might instruct them in the all-important truths regarding His death and resurrection. One could hardly conceive of a more propitious arrangement for their growth both in knowledge and grace. Did they profit by it? No; they not only did not understand what He told them but they used their time to dispute "among themselves who should be the greatest" (v. 34).

Possibly James, Peter, and John were a bit puffed up by their experience on the Mount, or perhaps the others were jealous because Jesus had taken them with Him. Or perchance it was just another unprovoked expression of the sinful pride that is so close to the surface of the human heart and mind.

II. An Example of Humility (vv. 35-37).

"True greatness consists not in attaining the first place in the notice and praise of the world, not in being served by many, but in being willing to stoop down to a humble place, not for the sake of self-effacement, not in timid diffidence, but in order to serve others for the sake of Christ" (Erdman).

Note carefully that it is the receiving of a little one in the name of Christ that brings to us the glory of His presence with us. Every deed of kindness and love is commendable and has its own reward, but there is a vast difference between it and humble service in the name and for the glory of Christ.

III. A Lesson in Co-operation (vv. 38-41).

John, quick to apprehend spiritual truth, sees in the teaching of Christ concerning the little child the condemnation of something he had done. " 'If indeed it be true that to receive a child, an ordinary everyday child, is to receive Christ, and to receive God,' said John within himself, 'what did I do when I forbade that man who in the Name was casting out a demon?' Verily, the light had broken in upon him."

The man who casts out demons, or who gives the disciple of Jesus a cup of water, in His name—that is with true faith in Christ, and in His power, and for His glory—must be a believer. He may not belong to our group or circle, he may not speak our language, he may not use our methods, but if he is serving Christ we should not forbid him or speak evil of him. God has at times called a man to witness for Him, who has done so in a manner distasteful to others, and these in turn have aligned themselves against him and hindered his full usefulness in the gospel. One of the great evangelists of the last generation used methods which shocked many church folk. They stood against him, and yet that man was used to win hosts of business and professional men that the church had scarcely touched, into earnest Christian testimony and service which continues to this day. You and I may not like one another's appearance, or voice, or methods, but let us love and co-operate with one another for Christ's sake!

The Word of God

The word of God will stand a thousand readings; and he who has gone over it most frequently is the surest of finding new wonders there. —J. Hamilton.

Good Intentions

Good intentions are at least the seed of good actions.—Sir William Temple.

Even as Christ

True forgiveness is a very strong virtue.

Source of The Columbia River

THE COLUMBIA, largest of the rivers on the Pacific Coast of the United States, finds its actual source in the great icefield covering the crest of this peak in Jasper National Park, Alberta. The mountain, known as Snow Dome, lies within a few hundred yards of the new motor road between Jasper Park Lodge and the Columbia Icefield, biggest glacial area south of the Arctic Circle in North America. Snow Dome, one of the many huge peaks in the Columbia Icefield Region, is the hydrographic apex of the Canadian Rockies and in addition to being the source of the Columbia River it is also the source of the Athabaska whose waters flow to the Arctic Ocean and of the Saskatchewan which reaches the Atlantic Ocean. A corner of the new motor highway is seen in the right foreground.

SWINE LOSSES FROM ENTERITIS ARE INCREASING

One of the growing and serious farm problems in most sections of the corn belt is enteritis, or infectious bowel disease of swine.

Commonly called "necro," enteritis is most common where young pigs are raised around old, contaminated or wet hog lots. Its first havoc is often an outbreak of contagious scours or white diarrhea in suckling pigs. Unlike cholera, enteritis creeps into a herd gradually. Symptoms to watch for include: loss of weight on good rations, dry skins, a tendency to scouring, and a prominent backbone. A post-mortem examination by a veterinarian reveals the typhoid-like ulcers and decay of the bowel wall.

The best precautions to take consist of selecting disease-free breeding stock, raising the pigs on clean ground, and prompt diagnosis and treatment by a veterinarian when first symptoms appear. Proprietary hog remedies do little or no good in preventing or curing "necro," and are often harmful.

A typical case of enteritis — Note emaciated condition.

One great disadvantage of enteritis in a herd of pigs is that it may cause trouble when affected pigs are vaccinated with serum and virus against hog cholera. Such herds should never be vaccinated until proper treatment of enteritis has been followed.

The Gold Skeletons of Panama

LESS than two hours by airplane from the Panama canal the Darien Indians protect one of the world's largest gold caches, buried with the dead. Since the Spanish explorers raided their villages, the Darien natives have kept all foreigners out. They value gold not for its wealth but because it is easily moulded and will not tarnish. When a chief dies a life-size golden skeleton is buried with him and each relative receives a small replica, also in gold. By the time a man passes away, he usually has quite a number of these replicas, and they are all buried with him. Thus the graves of Darien are veritable gold mines, filled with replica skeletons, called huacas. Since Dariens despise white men, few indeed are the huacas that have reached civilization.

Predicted Profit From Tobacco

In 1613 Robert Harcourt, an Englishman, wrote: "This commodity (tobacco) will bring as great benefit and profit as ever the Spaniards gained by the best and richest silver mine in all their Indies."

Early Prize Fighting Rules

Under the London ring rules a round in prize fighting ended when a man was knocked, fell or was thrown to the ground. Some rounds lasted many minutes, others only a second or two.

MIXING TWO RACES IMPROVES ON BOTH

Result of Mutiny on Bounty Interests Science.

New York.—Human beings can be improved by the right kind of cross breeding and inbreeding just as are corn, milch cows and swine, if the inbred race of half-breeds that resulted from the mutiny on the Bounty can be taken as indicative.

A man of a new type sprang from the nine English mutineers and the twelve Tahitian women who fled to Pitcairn island in the South seas 150 years ago. This new man is physically superior to both lines of his ancestry in all but his teeth, according to Natural History, the magazine of the American Museum of Natural History.

The mixing of races on Pitcairn island and neighboring Norfolk island, to which the Pitcairn folk spread, has proceeded for five generations under conditions which anthropologists consider ideal for scientific experiment. Pitcairn has a population of 203 and Norfolk a larger number.

The race mixing conditions were perfect, says Dr. Harry L. Shapiro, associate curator of physical anthropology, because there was no social stigma and no economic handicap such as is ordinarily imposed by neighboring so-called pure races. For many years the Pitcairn islanders were isolated from civilization.

The first result, Dr. Shapiro finds, was an almost explosive flowering of civilization. The hybrid mixture almost immediately was bigger and taller. Its stature was on the average three inches above the white men and two and a half inches over the Tahitian.

Fertility reached the human peak. Thus the first generation of children produced an average of 7.4 young by mating. The next generation pushed up to 9.1 offspring for each mating.

Gradually the flowering fell off. Today the children per family are down to three. Stature has dropped, too. But not back to the level of the original ancestry.

They are, says Dr. Shapiro, physically sound in all respects except one. The white man bequeathed his teeth to them. The perfect teeth which the Tahitian mothers had were lost. The Pitcairners have worse teeth, Dr. Shapiro says, than the average civilized man.

"Sky Pilot" Composes His Sermons While in the Air

Conneaut, Ohio.—The Rev. Paul H. Wood, athletic young pastor of Colebrook and Williamsfield Methodist churches, flies his own monoplane, wording his sermons in his mind as he speeds through the sky.

Wood says he thinks more clearly while he is flying than he does when he is earthbound. He began taking lessons only last May, and is spending all the time possible in the air in order to qualify for a private pilot's license. He bought his plane two months ago.

"When I first made a tailspin," he says, "it was a terrible sensation. I became very ill, and my head ached. After a few tailspins the sensation was no longer present, and now I find that I like to send my plane into a spin."

Wood attended Ashbury college in Kentucky, took graduate work at Ohio State university and filled his first pastorate at Nevada, Ohio. Total membership of the two churches he serves is three hundred. He lives with his parents. He is thirty-two and unmarried.

New Brick-Maker Turns Soil Into Adobe Homes

Fresno, Calif.—Sun-dried adobe brick, moulded slowly and painstakingly by hand to build the old California missions, is expected again to become an important building material as the result of the perfection of a new type of brick-making machine.

Evidence of the durability of adobe are the historic Carmel and Santa Barbara missions, the first United States custom house in California at Monterey, and the battle-scarred Alamo in Texas.

The apparatus is moved to the prospective homesite, dirt excavated for the foundation is shoveled into it, and out come the bricks which, with drying, are ready for use, according to J. J. Becker, inventor of the machine.

Becker pointed out the bricks may be made almost instantaneously from almost any kind of soil. He has constructed 28 homes in the San Joaquin valley since he completed the machine.

"Gizzard Stone" Indicates Minnesota Had Dinosaurs

Minneapolis.—Evidence of the existence in Minnesota of dinosaurs during the Mesozoic era have been found here by Mrs. C. R. Stauffer, wife of a professor of geology at the University of Minnesota. A "gizzard stone" from one of the prehistoric reptiles was found by Mrs. Stauffer at the foot of a cliff near Lake City while accompanying her husband on a field trip.

The stone is a pre-glacial flint from a formation known geologically as Shakopee limestone. Weighing more than three ounces, it was highly polished and worn smooth. Dr. Stauffer said it evidently had been swallowed with the dinosaur's food.

ISOLATED ISLANDS BECOME IMPORTANT

Used as Steps in Another Trans-Pacific Airline.

Washington. D. C.—As airlines weave an air web over the Pacific, isolated islands become important land falls. Although the Samoan islands, on the United States-New Zealand route, long have been important among the Pacific possessions of the United States, Kingman reef, like Wake island on the San Francisco-China route, was uninhabited and of little use before it was chosen as a stop for the recent test flights of the ill-fated "Samoa Clipper."

"The new route," says the National Geographic society, "brings the Antipodes two weeks closer to the United States. The schedule calls for a three-day jump from Honolulu to Auckland.

"Kingman reef, 1,067 miles southwest of Honolulu, is the first stop on the 4,400 mile outward flight from Hawaii. There, a four-masted schooner, Trade Wind, serves as a floating airport. The vessel is equipped with a radio station, weather bureau, and refueling facilities. Limited land on the tiny reef leads to the possibility of mooring a floating hotel in its coral lagoon. Some high ground, however, promises eventual improvements such as a station and storehouses.

Pause at Pago Pago.

"About 1,500 miles south of Kingman reef, propellers will pause at Pago Pago bay, best and safest harbor in the Samoan archipelago. Pago Pago (pronounced Pango Pango) is on rugged Tutuila, one of six volcanic islands which make up American Samoa, lying east of British Samoa's chain of eight. An immense volcanic crater forms the harbor of Pago Pago. Important chiefly as a naval base, American Samoa is administered by the Navy department; the commandant of Pago Pago's naval station functions as governor. Samoan treaty of 1878 granted to the United States the right to establish at Pago Pago a coaling and supply station for her naval and commercial vessels.

"Samoans, purest of Polynesians, prove this relief station wisely chosen. Gentle-voiced and easy-living, their very characters spell out relaxation. No echo of the high-powered motor's drone is the Polynesian dialect, called the Italian of the Pacific. Since tradition names Savaii, British Samoa, as dispersion center of the Polynesian race over the Pacific ocean from Hawaii to New Zealand, it is not surprising to find an excellent type in Pago Pago. Light brown of color, of splendid physique, and of regular features, they maintain mental and social standards that are high among Pacific peoples. They are simple, generous, honorable, hospitable folk, but brave fighters when necessary.

"It is natural in such a climate where wants are few that Samoans do not like to work. Their food is easily produced: breadfruit requires no cultivation; bananas, taro, and yams demand little more than planting. Pigs and chickens are raised, but reserved for banquets and festive occasions.

Fishing Is Not Work.

"Although reluctant to toil in towns and country, Samoans will paddle canoes all day while seafishing. The women, too, enjoy collecting clams and catching shellfish. Often the men spend a whole day spearing fish along the reefs.

"Equally enthusiastic are both men and women about song and dance. Robert Louis Stevenson described their steps as vulgar and unattractive, but the dancing is never indecent before foreigners.

"With no factories in American Samoa, the chief product and only export, copra, is prepared by the primitive but satisfactory method of spreading the coconut meat on mats in the sun to dry. Women's hands weave these mats with sword-like leaves from the pandanus plant.

"From Samoa's solitude to New Zealand's gateway and greatest city is approximately 1,800 miles on the proposed air route. Auckland is the grand entrance to a veritable treasure house of natural phenomena — spouting geysers, smoking mountains, and boiling springs of therapeutic value. Forest-clad hills, rich in timber trees and bush scenery, fringe the city's boundaries. And Auckland is the natural outlet for one of the most productive countries in the world. On the trade route of the Panama canal, it is a busy seaport with an excellent harbor.

"In 1837 the site of Auckland was but a fern-clad gully. Two years later Captain Hobson arrived, and in 1840, as governor, raised the British flag over the settlement of Auckland. Here was New Zealand's seat of government until Wellington became capital in 1864. More concerned with commerce than politics, Auckland now engages in numerous industries—shipbuilding, sugar-refining, fruit-canning, timber-converting, and the manufacture of ammunition, sashes and doors, rope, twine, pottery, brick, tile, varnish and boots."

150-Ton Signpost Erected

London.—More than 150 tons of concrete have been used to make Great Britain's largest signpost—the aerial signpost just completed in the meadows at King's Langley, Herts.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Fame: George M. Cohan chuckles over this one: The famous actor was strolling along West Fifty-second street with Austin Marshall, juvenile in "I'd Rather Be Right." Marshall, fresh from the University of Pennsylvania, is appearing in his first Broadway show. An auto passed and a man stared back and shouted: "Look, there's Austin Marshall!"

• • •

Obit: Joralemon has gone to his reward. Joralemon was the horned toad that came to New York with an Austin delegation to the American Legion convention away back in September and one evening became the property of Bill, who used to attend the University of Texas. He got lost in a three-room apartment, was found three weeks later in the gas stove and spent the rest of his time in a dishpan over the pilot light, horned toads not being adapted to northern winters. For weeks he didn't eat. Then he took up a diet of cockroaches. Las cucuracha or the winter of loneliness of the big town got him. He lost interest in life completely, then turned up his toes. And so, goodby, Joralemon.

• • •

Educational: Michael (Mickey) MacDougall is a detective who for the last 15 years has made his living exposing card sharps who ply their profession on ocean liners, in swell clubs and other places where there is money. He estimates that he has saved the gullible about a million bucks since he has been on the trail of professional gamblers. Well, Mickey dropped into the offices of Phillips Lord after business hours and with a deck of cards illustrated some of the tricks of the sharks. When he had finished his demonstrations one of the script writers asked him to sit in a penny ante game. And it cost the detective who knows all the tricks of the pros $3.80 to learn some new ones taught him by amateurs.

• • •

Change: There is a touch of irony in the fact that Bob Stanley is the musical director of an air series dealing with famous fortunes. If it hadn't been for the World war, Stanley himself would have been in the high income brackets. The war swept away the personal wealth and the immense circus holding of the Mroczek family, who were the Barnum and Bailey of continental Europe. Bob Stanley is a son of that family, his real name being Stanley Mroczek.

• • •

Horses: Nino Martini, of the opera and screen, has what is said to be the largest collection of toy horses in America. He started his collection years ago and has made it a serious hobby. His latest acquisition is a tiny bronze horse, which he holds is the smallest in the world. He calls it Minie Muni.

• • •

Drama: Some time ago I asked if any one still read O. Henry. Mrs. Anne Stacke Crozier of Dallas, Texas, does. She believes that the life of Sydney Porter would make a thrilling drama for the New York World's fair. I agree with her that there is much drama in the life of the man who saw New York with such a seeing eye. But a dramatist with whom I spoke, I regret to report, didn't see it that way. Then, too, there was that young woman in charge of the book department of a department store. She, too, is an O. Henry fan but says that demand for his books has just about vanished.

Music: Wilfred Pelletier, conductor of the Metropolitan opera auditions, says that he can tell after a hopeful sings five notes whether that person will make a star. And his statistics show that of the 800 persons who appeared for tests last year, more than 50 per cent sang "Pace Pace Mio Dio."

Mechanized War Called Failure in the Orient

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Colonel Henry W. Miller, chief of American heavy artillery during the World war, finds proof in the Chinese and Spanish wars of his contention that bombers and tanks and other high-priced instruments of modern warfare are largely a waste of money.

Miller now is head of the University of Michigan department of mechanical and engineering drawing and is considered an authority on artillery.

War in China and Spain has demonstrated, he believes, that the common soldier with his rifle and machine gun still is the determining factor in winning battles.

He points to China's surprising stand against Japan as proof that giant bombing planes, spectacular flame-throwers, motorized cavalry and artillery are useless against an entrenched force of infantry.

"You may lay down a barrage of heavy artillery until it seems no living thing could survive," Miller said, "yet the enemy will appear in force from the ground to meet your infantry advance.

"Bombing ground troops from the air is more costly, and even less effective. Bombers should be used only against cities, factories, rail centers, munition depots and concentration camps."

NIXONS VISIT KRAHL FAMILY IN ARIZONA

Enroute to their home in Los Angeles, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Nixon stopped to visit with Rev. and Mrs. A. M. Krahl at Yuma, Arizona. Rev. Krahl and his wife and two youngest children have just moved from their Maywood home to Yuma, where the former Antioch pastor took up his new charge as superintendent of the Yuma Indian Mission at Yuma. This mission is operated and maintained by the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. church. The Yuma Indian reservation is located in California just across the line from Yuma, and lies along the Colorado river extending north to the Picacho Mountains, a tract of some 19 square miles.

These Indians make pottery and bead work.

Rev. and Mrs. Krahl expect to enjoy their new duties and think it will be very interesting work.

Church School—9:45 A. M.
Worship Service—11:00 A. M.
Choir rehearsal every Thursday at 7 o'clock p. m.
Official Board Meeting the second Wednesday of every month.
Ladies Aid business meeting first Wednesday of every month at 3 p. m.
Friendship Circle business meeting third Wednesday of every month at 8 p. m.

On account of the absence of the pastor who has been on an extended trip through Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, and Iowa, no church notes have appeared the past two weeks.

Interest in the church is steadily growing. The total attendance at all church functions for the past three months has been: February, 1054; March 1105; April, 1417. The largest attendance at Sunday School for any one Sunday is 140.

The Easter season was very gratifying. Pre-Easter services were well attended. The Easter program by the Sunday School was an illustration of the possibilities of youth when properly directed. Our superintendent, Mrs. Childers, the department heads, and the teaching force are to be congratulated. The Easter cantata rendered by the choir, under the leadership of Mr. Pollock, was both inspiring and uplifting. The pastor wishes to thank all who had a part in helping to bring to its close this sacred occasion in this beautiful manner. The material results of the day are: ten new members, and more than a hundred dollars offering.

Children's Day, the second Sunday in June, will be the next big day for the Sunday School.

who passed away one year ago today.

What is home without a father?
All the things the wohld may end
For when we lost our Father
We lost our dearest friend.
He wore the crown of patience
Through years of struggle with those hands that rest forever
Were the hands that made our home.
Father and husband, we miss your loving smile.
But you left us to remember none on earth can take your place.

MOTHER'S DAY

Mother's Day will be observed at the Methodist Church next Sunday. Both the music and the sermon will give emphasis to the occasion. We will appreciate your presence and cooperation in an effort to pay due respect to those of the past and present who, more than any others, have been the guiding power in life. The pastor will appreciate having you bring your Mother's Day flowers to the church for this service. Bring them when you come and take them when you return home. Thank you.

Mrs. E. J. Lutterman entertained the members of her bridge club at her home Friday afternoon.

Local Teachers to Hold Annual Dinner Wednesday

Faculty members of the Antioch High school and grade school teachers of Antioch and the rural schools of the township will hold their second annual dinner at the high school cafeteria next Wednesday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The schools to be represented at the meeting comprise one of the units of the North Shore Division of the Illinois Education association.

The speaker will be Dr. Paul A. Schilpb, professor of philosophy at Northwestern university.

Mothers Visit Students at University of Illinois

Mrs. W. W. Warriner, Mrs. B. J. Hooper, Mrs. Horace Culver, Mrs. C. W. Reinebach, Mrs. S. B. Nelson, Mrs. Geo. White and Mrs. L. Bonner were guests over the week-end of their sons and daughters who are students at the University of Illinois at Urbana. They attended several programs and services held in observance of Mother's Day.

For Mother's Day

A White Purse or a pair of Hose from MariAnne's.

THE EGOTISTICAL LUCAS

Lucas says he won't draw a crowd to hear Lyons flay the New Deal. That's what his political mentor told him to say.

The real fact is Lucas doesn't dare tangle in debate with the dynamic Lyons.

Before fall comes the prairies of Illinois will ring with what Dick Lyons has to tell the voters about "New Dealers,"

The forceful Dick won't need the assistance of Rubber Stamp Scott to draw crowds.

Good soldiers in battle don't hide behind papier mache breastworks. They stand up and fight. Lincoln and Douglas did. They debated the issues of that campaign for the enlightenment of the people.

It's a fairly reasonable guess that Dick will make Scott regret many times his silly response in declining an invitation to debate the issues of a campaign.

Found Long Lost Orchid

Once one of the rarest orchids in the world, the Cypripedium, or Venus' foot—known to gardeners as lady's slipper—dwindled in numbers to such an extent that at one time there was only one specimen known to be in existence in the Western hemisphere. No one knew where the original collector had stumbled across the rarity, and a London firm offered 1,000 pounds for a specimen of the "lost" orchid. After a lapse of years a civil engineer working in Nepal came across the long-sought bloom growing profusely in the tropical jungle. He sent a number of plants to England, where they grew and flourished.

STYLE HIGHLIGHTS FOR SPRING BRIDES

Contrast Colors Are Feature of the Wedding Picture.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Circular face veil caught with a flower pompon at crown of the head is a new fancy of the mode designed for spring brides who plan a simple daytime ceremony. The veil is circular, reaching scarcely to the shoulders, and is topped with a flower cluster that blends with the gown in color.

Also very new and designed along lines of simplicity is the stop-at-the-shoulder circular maline veil finished with two rows of rattail braid, the same crowned with a tiara of orange blossoms. Ask your milliner to show you these two new-type veils designed especially for the simple noon wedding. See also the lovely tulle bridal veils that are appliqued with little cutout satin love birds.

To sum up the veil theme, interest to a great extent divides between picturesque Spanish lace headdress and veil for formal brides, simple monks' caps that capture one's fancy because of their exquisite simplicity, tiaras and lace halos that achieve off-the-face brim effects.

In the wedding picture ensemble much use is being made of contrast colors. Chartreuse worked with corn gold is considered a smart color scheme. One way of stressing color is for the attendants to wear satin braided halos with gay piquant veils to match. All-white weddings bespeak high-style this spring.

And here's something very new. The 1938 bride instead of carrying the usual bouquet may wear a beautiful corsage. In her hand she bears a treasured wee Bible. After the wedding she wears the handsome corsage on her gown.

Watteau weddings are quite the vogue. Especially charming are the colorful Watteau hats that tilt over one eye, that tie with velvet ribbons or are surmounted with flowers. Watteau pleats down the back of the bridemaids' gowns, if you please.

WHITE ACCENTS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Polly Tucker, heroine of the book by Sara Pennoyer, has become quite a famous little lady. Here is the version of a dress that was designed especially for Polly by a famous fashion artist. It is a lovely acetate print, which comes in white combined with spruce blue, olive green or brown. To assert its modishness it takes on white accents. The corselet belt curved subtly to fit the waistline, is made of white felt laced with cording made of the print. The stylish hat with its shovel brim is in white felt to agree with the accessory scheme of things. Her bag is the new "tom tom" in white calf and her abbreviated white fabric gloves are the now-so-chic wrist-bone length. A perfect dress for late afternoon cocktails, lunch at the hotel or for various club affairs.

Trees Manufacture Own Food

The food on which a dormant tree feeds and which causes it to grow is manufactured in the summer. The mineral salts from the ground are transformed in the leaves, which become food factories through the action of air and light. Part of this reserve food is stored in stems, limbs, trunk and roots. In the winter this reserve is drawn upon to sustain life in the cells.

VEAL FEEDING PLAN WILL NOT DEVELOP PROFITABLE HEIFERS

Dry Feed Builds Big Frames and Strong Bones for Milkers.

"Three days is not a very long time. Yet it is on the third day after a heifer calf is dropped that the dairyman must decide whether she is to be vealed or grown out as a milker," says W. R. Arends, head of the Calf Department of Purina Mills. "The reason dairymen must make such a quick decision is that the feeding plan for growing out a fine veal is not satisfactory for growing out a high producing heifer.

"In growing out veal calves the object of feeding is to make the animal retain its baby fat and add to it all the milk fat possible," Arends says. "Fleshy quick growth and fat are wanted in veals. Beef tendencies are encouraged. In raising veals milk or rich fattening feeds are best. Little emphasis need be put on bone, muscle, and frame development."

Heifers Need Special Feed

But when heifer calves are to be grown out as milkers and entirely different system of feeding must be followed. Growth, not fat, is the primary objective. Beef tendencies must be eliminated. Big husky frames with lots of capacity are most important. At every stage of growth the calf should resemble a miniature cow. The only time any fattiness should appear is 90 days before freshening. Extra flesh is needed then to prevent a sharp loss in weight after calving.

"Calves intended for milkers should be taken off milk as soon as possible and given dry feed that contains all the essential ingredients for building husky frames and strong bodies," Arends recommends. "A plan to entirely eliminate milk from the ration of heifer calves after the first thirty days has been worked out at the Purina Experimental Farm, where hundreds of calves have been grown out to become part of the Purina milking herd.

Milk First Three Days

"At the Farm calves are left with their mothers the first three days. During that time they get the colostral milk from their dams. After three days they are taken from their dams and taught to drink water and eat dry calf startena and hay. Milk is fed in limited amounts. On the plan used at the Purina Experimental Farm calves are given two quarts of milk per day for the first week along with starting feed and hay."

At the beginning of the second week the amount of milk is increased to four quarts, with free access to calf startena, hay, water, and a little salt. Milk is increased to five quarts per day the beginning of the third week, but on the twenty-first day is cut down to three quarts, and after the fourth week no milk at all is fed. After the first thirty days, calf startena hay, a little salt, and plenty of water is the entire ration.

Baby Fat Disappears

Between the fifth and sixth weeks the success of the feeding program begins to show itself. The future milker is seen in miniature. Baby fat begins to disappear and the angular, straight-backed frame of the heavy milker comes into evidence. By removing milk from the ration tendencies toward beefiness are eliminated.

Heifers raised on this feeding program have clean-cut throats, sharp withers, and large capacity—all signs of a good milker in the making.

OIL TANKERS TO BE BUILT FOR WAR USE

U. S. to Pay for Arming Ships Privately Owned.

Washington.—The United States has begun to move forward toward its goal of armed peace by joining hands with private enterprise, without congressional sanction or action, to meet urgent navy requirements.

Marking a new policy in the national defense program, the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has signed an agreement with the maritime commission to construct twelve high-speed tankers which could be transformed overnight into auxiliary fighting vessels.

During times of peace, the vessels would go about their own business, transporting oil. But, in the event of war, the ships literally would be thrown into high gear, guns and navy searchlights would be mounted and the cruising range extended.

United States Pays for Arming.

Standard Oil—and other oil companies probably will take part in the program—has agreed to pay for the construction and maintenance of the tankers, with the maritime commission standing the cost of the auxiliary equipment.

Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the commission, announced the company had awarded contracts totaling $37,556,004 for the twelve tankers to four shipbuilding concerns, each to build three.

The latest agreement, plus construction of twelve high-speed cargo vessels, for which bids will be opened February 1, and a modern safety liner to replace the Leviathan in the North Atlantic, will bring to twenty-five the number of ships now a part of the commission's ambitious building program.

Jobs for 10,000.

Cost of the ships was estimated between $60,000,000 and $75,000,000, unofficially and would give employment to an estimated 10,000 shipyard workers.

Kennedy pointed out that the agreement did not represent a subsidy to Standard Oil but constituted a step in national defense. The commission's share in the cost of construction will be $10,563,000.

The ships will have a speed of 16½ knots fully loaded compared with 12½ knots of the ordinary tanker. They will have a tonnage of 16,300 tons dead weight, a length of 525 feet and a cargo capacity of 150,000 barrels.

Modern in every detail, the horsepower will be stepped up to 12,800, thus being able to develop 300 per cent more power than the ordinary commercial tankers.

Most Widely Inscribed Palindrome

The most widely inscribed palindrome, or phrase spelled the same backward as forward, is a Greek motto of 25 letters which means "Wash my transgressions, not only my face" and which is carved on the fonts of many Christian churches throughout the world.—Collier's Weekly.

Shrinking Heads!

JIVARO headhunters of inner South America are also master head shrinkers. The master of them all, a crafty old fellow who worked in complete seclusion, shrunk the man and wife shown here. The big jawed man and the narrower faced woman had been killed many miles away by another tribe, and their heads sold to the shrinker for ten yards of red cloth. No modern taxidermist could do a job like this. The Jivaros can take a human head, work over it patiently until, through the neck, they have picked out every piece of the skull and head without damaging the facial skin or features, and then, with frequently heated sand and little hot pebbles, gradually shrink the skin and tissues to the size of an orange. Strings through the lips keep the heads from "talking back." Tourists in Peru and Ecuador buy them.

Dangers Faced by Archeologists

Very real are the dangers archeologists often must risk. In Egypt they face sudden sandstorms, fierce heat; in Tibet, suspicious, hostile natives; in Central America, disease and deadly snakes; in most places, ordinary thieves, seeking valuable jewels of other civilizations. Yet their diggings have added page after page to ancient history, brought to light many interesting facts. Some of these: There were cities of half a million inhabitants in prehistoric times; Cretans, 4,000 years ago, had bathrooms much like modern ones; Roman boys scrawled slang on house-walls 2,000 years ago.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Bryn (James Brynildson III), a tall bronzed young man of wealth, and his chum, Tubby Forbes, are discussing Bryn's coming marriage. Tubby is opposed to the match, believing it a scheme to get Bryn's wealth from him. Should the girl, Deborah, whom Bryn had met at the office of his attorney, Ted Holworthy, marry Stuart Graham before her twenty-first birthday, she will inherit a vast fortune from her grandfather. Stuart had greatly displeased Deborah, who refuses to marry him. Bryn, posing as an unemployed engineer, offers to marry Deborah, as Stuart, for $50,000, they not to live as man and wife. Twenty-three years previous, Anne Larned had eloped with an adventurer on the day set for her wedding to Courtney Graham. Two days after the birth of her daughter, Anne died. Shortly after, the father was killed in an accident. The Larneds, grandparents, took the child with them to Oregon where, without child companions, Deborah grew up. To safeguard her from some fortune hunter, her grandfather had arranged for her to marry Stuart, son of Courtney Graham, when of age, believing the alliance would be a happy one. When Deborah was fifteen, her grandfather died. Securities had been set aside to keep the family, but a market crash left scarcely enough for them to live on. This was unknown to Deborah's grandmother, an invalid, Gary, a servant, managing the finances. At twenty, the thought of marriage greatly frightens Deborah. It had been planned that Deborah meet Stuart in Frisco, where they were to be married.

CHAPTER II.—Tubby and Bryn await Deborah in a hotel in Frisco. Over a period of one year the groom is to prove he is no fortune hunter and can make Deborah happy to the satisfaction of her grandmother. Otherwise the fortune is to go to charity. The will is somewhat ambiguous as to whom Deborah is to marry. The girl arrives with Holworthy. Tubby is surprised to find her charming and sweet, and greatly bewildered. The wedding over, the couple arrives at the home of Deborah's grandmother. The grandmother and Bryn, who she believes to be Stuart, take to one another, which somewhat displeases Deborah, who foresees difficulty when they are to separate.

CHAPTER III.—Deborah remonstrates with Bryn for his familiarity with her and his apparent insincerity toward her grandmother. Bryn declares he is sincere. Deborah believes Bryn has a sweetheart waiting for him. Grandmother plans improvements far beyond their means. Bryn's offer to borrow the money from Holworthy is accepted.

CHAPTER IV.—Bryn takes Grandmother shopping. He induces her to call him Bryn. Grandmother is outfitted, and Bryn buys candy and a dog for Deborah.

CHAPTER V.—Deborah is displeased over Bryn's giving her gifts. While repairing the electric plant, Bryn falls from a ladder and is knocked unconscious. When Deborah pleads with him not to die, he attempts to take her hand, and she flees. While strolling in the evening, Bryn disregards Deborah's attempts at friendliness. She is very unhappy. Grandmother is constantly pointing out Bryn's thoughtfulness.

CHAPTER VI.—Tubby comes on a visit, and nearly exposes Bryn. Grandmother wonders. Bryn admits to Tubby he is in love with Deborah, but is afraid to show it for fear he'll frighten her, who he believes does not care for him. Tubby suggests inviting his sister Sally and her husband Simon, and Madeline, Simon's sister, believing they might help Bryn's cause. An invitation is sent. Deborah apologizes to Bryn for being horrid and tells him Grandmother suspects she doesn't love him. Bryn tells her of how he has been telling Grandmother of his love for her, and Deborah thinks he is describing his love for his own sweetheart. Deborah suggests Bryn move his bedroom to a sewing room off her sitting room to allay Grandmother's suspicions.

CHAPTER VII.—The invited guests arrive. Deborah thinks Madeline is Bryn's sweetheart, and is troubled. She admits to Grandmother that she loves Bryn. Deborah accepts Bryn's caresses and then breaks away. Madeline confesses she loves Tubby.

CHAPTER VIII.—Bryn intercepts a letter for Grandmother from Stuart. In it Stuart attempts to explain his actions and offers to go through with the marriage [not knowing Deborah is married], and says they may expect him Wednesday. The group decides to set a guard and capture Stuart.

CHAPTER IX.—From a talk with Tubby, Deborah gathers that Pilar D'Avillo is the girl in Bryn's life. Pilar arrives unexpectedly and is coolly received. Pilar tells of the friendship between her and Bryn. Deborah is sorry for Pilar, being shut away from Bryn. She tells Pilar of how she came to be married to Bryn and that he will be free by the end of a year. Pilar suggests that Bryn is simply having a new adventure and shows Deborah a beautiful ring which she says Bryn had given her. Pilar tells Bryn Deborah had described their marriage as one of convenience. Bryn tells Pilar he loves Deborah and aims to make her love him.

As the car stopped, Bryn rose, walked down the steps and stopped. His eyes met the triumphant eyes of the man driving the other car. For a moment, Bryn and Graham stood facing each other, Graham half out of his car. Then, without a word, perfectly calm, Bryn turned toward the veranda.

Deborah lifted her eyes and met Bryn's in helpless anguish. Bryn was smiling at her, a steady, warm, comforting smile that seemed to tell her that everything was all right, that she had nothing to fear. She could not understand. He came up the steps and stood beside Grandmother's chair. Tubby and Simon were standing helpless on the grass. Sally and Madeline had retreated to the doorway, and stood there, hand in hand, watching Grandmother, too. And Pilar, still and unmoving, sat in her chair behind the vines.

Stuart Graham, with that black smile of his, came across the grass from the driveway. He swung his wide shoulders confidently, and Deborah wished wildly that Bryn would go out and do something to him . . . anything . . . to stop that confident, steady advance, to wipe off that triumphant smile, to save Grandmother. But it was too late.

He stopped on the lowest step. He faced Grandmother. He bowed to her.

"Good-morning," he said brightly.

Grandmother inclined her head. "Good-morning," she replied.

"You are Mrs. Larned," he stated. "I think you will have heard of me, and from me. My name is Graham."

"Indeed?" Grandmother murmured, entirely calm. Her pulse beat was swift, but steady.

He stiffened at Grandmother's "Indeed?" "Stuart Graham," he repeated distinctly. "From Boston."

Grandmother inclined her head. "How do you do," she said coolly, with perfect self-possession, perfectly unmoved. "I knew your grandparents, I believe. And your father, too. I hope they are quite well?"

"Say," Graham demanded roughly of Bryn. This isn't Mrs. Larned herself. It's somebody dressed up to look like her. What're you trying to do, put something else over on me."

"I am Mrs. Larned," Grandmother said quietly. "You are Stuart Graham. I quite understand. Is there something I can do for you? Your father, as I remember him, was a gentleman, and he was our friend. Can I help you in any way for his sake?"

"You are Mrs. Larned?" he asked, incredulously. "You are Mrs. Larned, and you sit there as calm as ice when I tell you that I am Stuart Graham, and that this . . ." he indicated Bryn contemptuously, "that this fellow is nothing more than an imposter, a man who's been taking advantage of you, who's married your granddaughter without your consent?"

"This is all you have to say to me?" Grandmother asked. "Nothing that you have said seems to me particularly interesting, or of any importance. I understand. And what, then?"

Graham stood foolishly for a moment, regarding her with disbelieving eyes. Then "This is a fine kettle of fish," he said. "Your husband took every precaution to see that Deborah and I should marry each other, and without any compunction whatever you let her marry another man. What about me? I've been banking on marrying her, all my life!"

"I am sure that 'banking' is a very well chosen word," Grandmother commented.

He flushed darkly. "That's all very well. I suppose you realize that she doesn't get the money, now that she's married this smart guy who's got you wound around his finger? I suppose you can afford to snap your fingers at that, at deliberately throwing away everything your family ever had?"

"Mr. Graham, I cannot think that this is any of your affair," said Grandmother, quietly. "I am sorry, but I cannot possibly see why you concern yourself with this matter. It no longer is any concern of yours. Your interest, it seems to me, is a trifle belated." Grandmother put Deborah's hand firmly away from her, and stood up. "And I will add, now that I have seen you, that I shall thank God every moment of the remainder of my life that it is none of your concern, that when you had the opportunity to make it so, you thought us beneath your respect. I would rather have starved, and Deborah with me, than to have her marry you. I would rather see Deborah where her mother is, in her grave, than in the hands of such a man as you are."

Graham drew back. "You believe anything you're told, don't you?" he sneered. "I suppose you think this is a very romantic marriage, this match between the girl and a young rolling-in-gold millionaire, this James Weldon Shipley Brynildson, Third, who pretends to fall in love with your precious granddaughter and marries her at sight. Well, let me tell you, it isn't half as romantic as it looks. Do you know what he is? He's nothing but a cheap adventurer, that's all, going around the world buying thrills with his money. This is a new one, this is. He hasn't done this before. But wait . . . when he's tired of his new toy, then you'll see what'll happen. He'll drop her like a wrung mop-rag."

"That's enough," Bryn said sharply, and stepped forword. He turned to Grandmother. "Is there anything further you wish to say to him?" he asked her quietly.

"Nothing, my boy," Grandmother answered steadily, still standing proudly.

"Then," Bryn said directly to Graham, "on your way. Go on," he said between his teeth, "if you know what's good for you."

Graham backed off precipitately. "Just a minute," Tubby said softly. "Where did you get all your information about our hero?"

"It's none of your damn' business," Graham said.

"Let him go," Bryn said sharply to Tubby. "It's obvious, isn't it?"

Pilar, back in the shadows, stirred. With a set frozen face she rose, walked past Grandmother and Deborah and Bryn, standing together at the top of the steps, and past Graham staring at her. She went across the grass and got into her car. She started the motor. The car turned on two wheels, scraped Graham's fender, and darted off, without a backward glance from Pilar.

* * * * * * *

The morning, Bryn discovered, had somehow whirled itself away. Pilar was gone; Graham was gone. Tubby and Madeline had gone wandering off into the woods, with an apple apiece, and an injunction from Sally not to return until Tubby could look at Madeline without that dazed expression. Sally herself had taken a cushion out to the lawn after lunch, with that avowed intention of getting another layer of sun-tan, but she had promptly gone to sleep there in the heat, and Simon had carried out an umbrella and erected it over her to keep her from burning. Grandmother was asleep, too, on the couch before the open window in the sitting room. Bryn left the room softly, and shut the door behind him; and then he went on with his search for Deborah.

He went down the path toward the brook with long, quick steps, and came at last to the solid ring of trees that formed the back of Deborah's most hidden sanctuary.

Bryn rapped lightly on the tree trunk under his hand. She turned, quickly, and looked up, her eyes dark and still full of dreams, her mouth red and soft. Bryn stood between the two trees, and just outside them. "May I come in, Deborah?" he asked.

She dropped her lashes. "If you . . . wish," she said in a low voice.

He squeezed through the opening and came down the slope toward her. She was seated in the hollow like a throne, with a level bank to sit on and a sloping back covered with thick green grass. She did not speak. Bryn went down the slope and came to a halt below her.

Deborah would not look up. Bryn moved nearer and dropped down a yard away, his eyes upon her. "Haven't you forgiven me," Bryn asked at last, gently, "for not telling you that Grandmother knew? I told her on that ride."

"You did try to tell me."

"Tell me what's troubling you, Deborah. All the fears and worries are gone, dear."

She caught her lower lip between two white teeth. She shook her head.

Bryn moved closer to her. He tried to take her hands, but she pulled them away.

She swallowed. Then, "I wish you'd go away," she said under her breath.

"Go away?"

"The others are going today. After dinner. You could go with them."

"Go away, Deborah? Go away from you, you mean? Leave you here? Go back to San Francisco?"

She nodded, her eyes on the leaf.

Bryn put his face down into his hands. After a long time he said, slowly, "I don't understand, Deborah. This morning you . . . why, you gave me this flower!" he said, touching it. "I thought you were beginning to care a little about me."

She did not reply.

He looked down at Deborah's bent head. "That's final, then?" he asked quietly. She did not answer.

"Sorry," he said after a moment. "I suppose I was a fool to think that you could possibly care about me. You're so exquisite, and so fine, and you're not made out of ordinary stuff like the rest of us. I might have known from the beginning that it wasn't any use. I think I did know, Deborah, so you needn't reproach yourself."

She was gazing up at him, still with that anguished look in her eyes. Bryn managed a smile. He held his hand out. "Shake hands?" he inquired. "If you don't mind, Deborah, I think I'll go now instead of waiting until tonight."

She got to her feet slowly. Her face was as white as chalk. She put her hand in his. "Good-by," she whispered, and he stood for a moment looking into her eyes, then turned away.

"No," Deborah said clearly. "No. It isn't any use. I can't let you go." She was beside him, her hands on his arms, her face upheld to his. "I can't let you go," she said. "I don't care what you think about me. I don't care if I am a new kind of toy to you. I don't care if this is only a part of an adventure to you, an adventure that will be over . . . tomorrow, or in just a little while. I don't care about anything, or what happens to me, only I can't let you go away from me. I haven't got any pride or any strength left." Bryn stood, motionless, staring down at her in bewilderment. "Don't you understand?" she cried again. "I . . . I love you."

"Love me?" he repeated incredulously.

"You mean," Bryn repeated, with dawning understanding, "you mean, you love me?"

She lifted her wet lashes and looked at him. With a little groan he moved his arms at last, and closed them tight around her. He bent his head, and put his lips to her eyelids.

"Deborah."

She turned her head, slowly, and looked up at him. A flood of color swept up over her face. He smiled tenderly down at her. "You funny little chicken," he said. "Do you think it would be much of an adventure just to marry anybody, Deborah? Do you think I would have offered to marry just any girl at all who happened to be in your predicament? Not in this world, you foolish baby. The minute I saw you standing there in the office, Deborah, something said to me . . . there's your girl, Bryn . . . out of all the world. I was complete... from that very first look, sweetheart, and I wasn't going to let you go no matter what happened.

"I was afraid to do anything at all for fear I'd lose you, and it's been just about as bad ever since we were married. You don't know how often I've gone out and cut firewood and hammered nails just to keep myself away from you."

Deborah turned and buried her face again in his shoulder.

He put a hand beneath her cheek, and turned her head again. His eyes looked down into hers, and gray clung to violet again, but there was a new expression in both. Then, slowly, he bent his head, and put his lips down to hers, so soft and young and innocent.

"Deborah," he said gently, "I love you. You're the only girl in the world, as far as I'm concerned, Deborah . . . will you be my wife? What I'm asking you now is whether or not you think that some time you might love me enough really to be my wife. I couldn't hope for so much yet, but later, when you get to know me better, and trust me more, do you think you could?"

She began to understand. "When you're a wife you think about . . . that is, about having children, don't you?"

"If you want children."

"Well," Deborah said positively, "I do. There isn't any difficult about that. I've wanted them for years and years. I built this playhouse for them, long ago, for a little boy and a little girl." She looked at him and smiled. "So that's all right," she said.

"Yes," he said after a moment, "that seems to be all right. I think we could practically count on something like that eventually." He reached into his watch pocket and drew out a ring box. Then drew out the ring. He lifted Deborah's hand, and slowly took off her wedding ring. He slipped the new ring on the finger where the wedding ring had been, lifted the hand and put it to his lips. "That's your engagement ring, dear," he said.

Deborah looked down at it. It was a great gleaming pearl, flushed the palest rose, and set exquisitely in thin gold filigree. "It's . . . lovely," she breathed.

"It was my mother's."

Deborah looked up at him.

"When you want your wedding ring," Bryn went on carefully, lifting a curl on her temple, "when you're sure of me, and positive that you're making no mistake, and when you get to know that you feel about me the way I feel about you—as nearly as you can, of course . . . and can't live without me, I'll be very glad to put it back on your finger. As far as I'm concerned, Deborah, I never did approve of long engagements."

* * * * * * *

It was time at last to say good-by to the guests. Sally and Madeline got into knitted dresses and Simon and Tubby into knickerbockers, and their bags were put into the car, and Grandmother had insisted on having Gary pack a basket of fruit for them and at last they were gone.

Grandmother went to bed early, tired from a hard day. Deborah and Bryn sat near the door, and looked across at the moon. "I can't believe that you're real, and that you love me, and that we're here together, alone," he said. "Tell me again, Deborah."

She told him again, and when Deborah looked at him she knew that she loved him for always, and when he spoke his voice rang in her heart.

After a long time he rose. "You'd better get to bed, sweetheart," he said, and his voice held the deep low note in it she was beginning to understand. "It's been a long day for you, too."

"Are you coming up too?"

"I'll take you up. I'll carry you up," he decided, and slipped his arms beneath her. They reached the top at last, and were in her sitting room.

"Why did you wear your wedding dress tonight?" he asked.

"Oh," Deborah murmured, "just because. Do you . . . like it?"

"I'll never forget the first time I saw you in it, Deborah."

She looked up at him. "This is the last time I'm going to wear it," she said. "It's so delicate, and old. I'm going to save it for . . . that is, I'm going to save it."

"Oh, Bryn, You Are a Big Silly."

"Aren't you going to wear it just once more, Deborah? When . . . just one more time, sweetheart?"

"No," she said under her breath. "This is the last."

He bent and kissed her white shoulder where the lace sleeves lay against it. "There, then," he said, "That's what I wanted to do the other time I saw it." Then he kissed her lips again, quickly. "Good-night," he said. "I've got to go."

"Why?

"Oh, Deborah!"

"I don't know why," she said. "Simon stays with Sally. Always. Doesn't he?"

"Yes, but . . ."

She stood on tiptoe and put her arms about his neck.

"Oh, Bryn, you are a big silly," she said contentedly. She kissed the cleft in his chin, and put her palm against his cheek. "I thought you didn't approve of long engagements?"

The First American Basketball Court

THREE hundred years before Columbus, Americans were playing basketball at Chichen Itza, the South American Mayan metropolis. They used a stone court 350 feet long surrounded by walls 35 feet high. The "basket," at either side, is a vertical limestone hoop through which the Mayans knocked the ball—not with their hands but with heads, shoulders, hips and knees. Far from pitied losing teams were usually slaughtered by the victors immediately after the contest. So perfect are acoustics in the court that a man's voice re-echoes 12 times, back and forth.

Byron Wrote Speedily

Lord Byron, the English poet, was one of those fortunate beings to whom genius came easily, and was therefore little appreciated. He wrote the book, "The Corsair," in 10 days, the "Bride of Abydos" in four days, and another while undressing after balls and masquerades.

Signal Horn From Tusk

An oliphant or olifant was the large signal horn of the Middle ages, made, as its name indicates, from the tusk of an elephant. It was the instrument of knights and men of high degree and its loss in battle was considered as shameful as the loss of sword or banner.

Jugtown Pottery in 1750

Jugtown pottery was first made about 1750 by descendants of a family of Staffordshire potters who settled in North Carolina.

Hades, Greek Name

Hades was the Greek name for the underworld and for its ruler.

District of Columbia Flower

A Few Electrical Hints

Never run ordinary cords under rugs. Cords become worn too quickly. There is a flat cord designed for this purpose.

Do not place cords in door jambs. Squeezing breaks the protective covering.

Never run cords over radiators or steam pipes.

Never leave heating appliances turned on when not in use.

Do not disconnect appliances by pulling on cord. Disconnect by pulling on the plug.

Cords should never be used as a substitute for permanent and properly installed wiring.

Examine cords regularly. Replace worn-out cords immediately to prevent "shocks" or "shorts."

Have all wiring and repairs to wiring made by a competent electrical contractor.

Ham Loaf

½ lb. ground pork
½ lb. ground ham.
½ cup bread crumbs
1/3 cup milk
1 egg
Brown sugar
Cloves
1 tablespoon chopped onion.

Mix well meat, bread crumbs, onion, milk and egg. Form into a loaf and place in baking pan. Stick with cloves and sprinkle with brown sugar. Bake in a moderate oven (325° F.) for 2 hours.

For Low Ceilinged Rooms

For low ceilinged rooms use vertical lines to create an illusion of height. Hang your curtains from the ceiling all the way to the floor in full lines. Looping breaks the line.

Chiffon Frock New

The chiffon formal frock in chartreuse with full length, matching chiffon coat tying, like the frock, at the neck, short sleeved and embroidered in delicate pastel beads, is new this season.

Laundry Hints

Remove all stains before laundering. Here are some common ones and their removing agent:

Rust—Oxalic acid solution.

Lipstick—Hot suds, peroxide or Javelle water.

Gum—Kerosene, carbon tetrachloride.

Grease—Use lard on wash goods—wash well. Use benzine or carbon tetrachloride on delicate fabrics.

Iodine—Very hot suds. Ammonia.

Fruit Juices—Pour boiling water through. Bleach with peroxide or Javelle water.

Indelible Ink—Alcohol. Boil in heavy suds.

Coffee—Launder—bleach with Javelle water.

Paint—Sponge with cloth dipped in carbon tetrachloride.

Egg—Wash in cold water then warm soap water.

Grass—Sponge with alcohol. Wash with soap and cold water—bleach. Or soak in kerosene, and wash out with soap suds.

Machine Oil—Use soap and cold water. Sponge with turpentine.

Scorch—Wet and bleach in sunshine.

Eggs Au Gratin

6 eggs, hard cooked
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Buttered soft bread crumbs
½ cup grated cheese
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
½ teaspoon grated horseradish
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper

Melt butter, add flour and blend. Add milk gradually; cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add cheese, green pepper, horseradish, salt and pepper and continue to stir until cheese is melted and sauce is smooth. Cut eggs in quarters lengthwise. Put eggs in casserole, add cheese sauce. Sprinkle buttered bread crumbs on top. Place under broiler to brown crumbs.

Rusk Foundations

For that new and different flavor, use French toast or tea rusks as a foundation for creamed dishes, in place of regular toast.

Lemon Clover Rolls

Ingredients: 2 cups sifted flour, ¼ cup sugar, ¾ teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1/3 cup milk, soured with 3 tabespoons lemon juice.

Sift together the dry ingredients and work in the shortening. Add the soured milk, combine and knead lightly. Form the dough into small, walnut-sized balls. Place 3 of these little balls in each cup or well greased muffin tins. Brush with melted butter and sprinkle with additional sugar into which has been worked some lemon rind. Bake in hot oven 20 minutes.

Books Printed Before 1500

Incunabula are specimens of early or primitive works of art or manufacture. In the book world, the term is applied to books printed before about 1500.

Coat of Angora Rabbit

The Angora rabbit has a long fleecy coat, usually a fine, white fur five to seven inches long; they are rather difficult to raise.

Luscious Devil's Food Is Cake Treat for All

End the dinner in a cheerful mood by serving a light, tender devil's food cake. This never-fail recipe is bound to find a place in your files immediately.

Devil's Food Cake

½ cup shortening
1¼ cups sugar
1 egg and 2 egg yolks (or two whole eggs)
3 squares (3 ounces) chocolate, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
2¼ cups cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon soda
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk.

Cream shortening and sugar thoroughly. Add eggs, chocolate and vanilla; cream until light and fluffy. Add flour, sifted with salt and soda, alternately with milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Pour batter into two greased deep 9-inch layer pans. Bake in moderate oven (350°) 30 minutes.

Spread Seven Minute Frosting between the layers and on top and sides of a Devil's Food cake for added goodness. It is a treat to make and a bigger treat to eat.

Seven Minute Frosting

2 egg whites
1½ cups sugar
5 tablespoons cold water
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
1/16 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Put all ingredients except vanilla in top of double boiler and beat with rotary egg beater or electric beater until thoroughly blended and white in color. Place over rapidly boiling water, beating constantly until frosting forms peaks, about 7 minutes. Remove from heat, add vanilla, and beat until cool and thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of two cake layers.

New "Ps" and "Qs" Urged as an Aid to Composition

Buffalo.—The reason many people find it difficult to put their thoughts on paper is that their handwriting cannot keep up with their ideas, according to Dr. Walter V. Kaulfers, of Stanford university, who advocates streamline English spelling and handwriting.

Dr. Kaulfers told the National Council of Teachers of English, which held its annual meeting here, that he favored a system of shorthand and simplified spelling.

"How much better it would be if we could be taught from the start to use a kind of shorthand that would make it possible for any one to write down an idea as fast as he could think," he said.

Soldiers Build Radio

Hamilton Field, Calif.—Built entirely by two United States army soldiers, a powerful 500-watt amateur radio station, capable of short-wave transmission to anywhere in the world, is nearing completion here.

Coeds Spend 2 Hours Daily Before Mirror

Canyon, Texas.—A student at West Texas State Teachers college here said the 130 girls in her dormitory average two hours daily before the looking glass.

The girl, who prefers anonymity for obvious reasons, said the schedule runs about like this: 30 minutes before the first morning class, 10 minutes before lunch, 5 minutes after lunch, 30 minutes before bedtime—with the remainder of the two hours consumed by interim primping or getting ready for "dates."

Borglum, the Soulptor

Solon Hannibal Borglum was born in Ogden, Utah, on December 22, 1868. He studied under Louis F. Rebisso in the Cincinnati Art school and under Fremiet in Paris. He took as his early subjects cowboys, Indians and other figures of Western life, notable works being his "Last Round-Up" and "Burial on the Plains." In 1911 he completed his bronze, "God's Command to Retreat," representing Napoleon on horseback. Two statues of his in stone were unveiled in 1920 in the churchyard of St. Mark's in the Bowery, New York city. He was Y. M. C. A. secretary with the French army in 1918, won the Croix de Guerre, and later was with the A. E. F. in France. He died in 1922.

Dangers Faced by Archeologists

Very real are the dangers archeologists often must risk. In Egypt they face sudden sandstorms, fierce heat; in Tibet, suspicious, hostile natives; in Central America, disease and deadly snakes; in most places, ordinary thieves, seeking valuable jewels of other civilizations. Yet their diggings have added page after page to ancient history, brought to light many interesting facts. Some of these: There were cities of half a million inhabitants in prehistoric times; Cretans, 4,000 years ago, had bathrooms much like modern ones; Roman boys scrawled slang on house-walls 2,000 years ago.

STYLE NOTES

Two colors are better than one.

Lace is combined with chiffon for evening.

Wear an amusing gadget on your coat lapel.

Pleated black chiffon dress is smart for day wear.

Unbelted tunic with pleated skirt is new style formula.

New trend toward transparency is announced for fabrics.

Gay little flower toque with colorful piquant veil is spring message.

Novel Patterns Are Shown in Prints for Spring Wear

From variegated tulips, or dragon flies, or modern masks, in straight rows, to irregular Persian stripes is the wide range of prints which carry on the bayadere influence. Fish and marine plants are neighbors in one print; while another repeats a window scene with flowered balcony.

"Vient de Paratire" shows rows of books on shelves, their titles clearly indicated; and "Pesage" is an amusing print of men's heads with top hats and monocles.

Light Toned Silk Is Used in Coats by Paris Expert

Maggy-Rouff shows for spring light-colored silk coats, bright-colored redingotes and jersey coats gathered and fastened with belts.

Her leading design is one of straight line, collarless and slightly shaped at the waistline. One coat on the draped, gathered type is made full-cut in black wool with detail at the waistline. It has a green belt.

Winter Blouses

Shirtwaist blouses in silk crepe to match dark-hued tailored suits are a feature of Molyneux's mid-season collection.

Onions and Garlic Found Useful to Fight Disease

Albany.—Dr. Daniel V. O'Leary, Albany health commissioner, contends that onions and garlic are useful in combating infectious diseases because of their immunity to bacterial attack.

"The chemicals in onions and garlic," he asserted, "which bring tears to the eyes, are now found to have germ-killing powers."

The chemicals have been isolated by Dr. Richard E. Vollrath, professor of physics, and Dr. Carl C. Lindgren, chairman of the bacteriological department of the University of Southern California, Dr. O'Leary said.

Horseshoe of 1847 Found in Oak Tree

Del Monte, Calif.—A horseshoe believed to be more than 90 years old was found imbedded in the heart of an ancient oak tree on the Del Monte golf course.

The shoe, which old-time residents here believe dates back to the days when nearby Monterey was the capital of Spanish California, was found in the center of a one-foot thick limb while the old tree was being cut down.

It was believed generally that the shoe was thrown by a horse nearly a century ago; that its rider hung it around a branch, and that the limb grew around it.

Naming Tulane University

Tulane university in New Orleans is named for Paul Tulane, for many years a merchant of New Orleans, who gave generously for the higher education of young people in that city.

Named Tombstone, Ariz.

Ed Schieffelin, the pioneer settler, named Tombstone, Ariz. He was told by friends when he left Fort Huachuca that he would find his tombstone there. Hence the name.

Virginal Played With Keys

A forerunner of the spinet and the harpsichord is the virginal, an instrument played with keys which pluck the strings rather than manipulating hammers that strike upon the strings as in the piano. The music of the virginal is dainty, especially delightful.

WOMAN DIES IN RAIL CRASH AT NO. CHICAGO

Antioch Girls Not Injured in Skokie Train Wreck

One death, eight persons injured and two derailed and damaged Skokie Valley trains figured in an unusual accident in North Chicago at 5 p. m. Sunday.

The accident occurred when Mrs. Amanda Oglesby, 45, colored, of North Chicago, drove her automobile into the path of a southbound two-car Skokie Valley train at Fifteenth street. The woman was crushed to death. She was the tenth auto fatality of the year in Lake county.

The train was derailed and bounded along the ties to Sixteenth street where it side-swiped a fast northbound two-car train.

Eight passengers were reported to be slighlty injured in the crash. The injured were taken to St. Therese hospital and were released after receiving first aid. None of the passengers on the southbound train were injured. Among the passengers on this train were Misses Jeanette and Florence Petersen, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Petersen of Antioch, who are employed in Chicago, and their cousin, Verna Lindberg.

WILMOT

Mr. and Mrs. Don Herrick, Mrs. Minnie Herrick, Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Elwood, Long Lake, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harry McDougall.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Long announce the birth of a daughter, Mary Jane, on Thursday, April 28, at the Burlington hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McDougall and Betty Jean have returned from a winter spent in Florida and other southern states. They made the trip by trailer and visited many interesting places.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Tyrrell, Lake Geneva, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Dolan and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. Kiehl, of Kenosha, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. George Faulkner.

There will be English services at the Peace Lutheran church Sunday morning at 9:30.

Dr. William Fletcher, Salem, will speak before the Mothers Club Tuesday evening at the school house on the subject of "Cancer." Following the business meeting a card party will be held with Mesdames Grace Stoxen, Walter Bernhoft and John Schwartz as hostesses.

Week-end guests of Miss Anna Kroncke were Lt. and Mrs. E. Kliesot, Madison, and their niece, Gisela Walters from Germany; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kroncke, Milwaukee; Mrs. August Jorgenson and daughter, Sylvia, Kenosha; Mrs. R. Gnerich and Judge George Kroncke, Madison.

A card party will be held at the Holy Name rectory on Thursday afternoon. The usual games will be played and refreshments served.

Mrs. H. Sarbacker is spending the week in Kenosha at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Sarbacker. Mr. Sarbacker has been seriously ill.

Miss Clara McPherson, of Long Beach, California, was a week-end guest at the George Hyde home. Miss McPherson was returning to California after making a trip to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Jule Kobs, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Jule Kobs, Jr., of Kenosha were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wertz.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Frank and children spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Frank.

Union Free High School

The five honor students in the Senior class of 1938 are Betty Galliart, Salem; Loretta Ficht, Brighton; June Pacey, Slades Corners; Ardis Lischka, Twin Lakes; Mary Baysinger, Salem.

Commencement exercises will be held on Thursday evening, June 9.

The school band accompanied by the director, Russell Ende, were at Whitewater for the day Saturday where the band was entered in the district contest. The local band made a very good showing and spent a very profitable day.

The baseball team was defeated by East Troy 11-4. Norris Farms suffered a 9-3 defeat from Wilmot when they played here last week. This week games with Waterford, at Waterford, and Mukwonago at Wilmot, are scheduled.

Chairman Arthur Fiegel, Milwaukee, of the Alumni Association and his committee are planning for the annual alumni banquet to be held at the gymnasium, Saturday evening, June 4.

The annual eighth grade visiting day is scheduled for Tuesday, May 10. All eighth graders in the county are welcome and are urged to attend so that thye may be able to visit the different departments and become acquainted with the activities carried on in the school.

Tuesday, May 10, a P. T. A. meeting will be held at the gymnasium. A program of student demonstrations, in part, a talk by Principal M. M. Schnurr and entertainment with dances and music has been arranged.

"The Poor Fish," a three act farce comedy will be given by members of the Senior Class of 1938 at the Wilmot gymnasium at 8:15 on Friday evening.

When Men Disliked Coffee

When coffee and tea first began to come into Ohio, many of the menfolk pushed the beverages aside as "slops," fit enough only for women.

Queen of Sheba Was a Semite

Sheba is the name of an ancient country in South Arabia, and the queen of Sheba was a Semite, as the modern Arabs are

U. S. Army Officers' Insignia

A United States army general wears four silver stars, a lieutenant general three silver stars, a major general two silver stars, a brigadier general one silver star. A colonel wears a silver eagle, a lieutenant colonel a silver oak leaf, a major a gold oak leaf, a captain two silver bars.

Milk Heavier Than Cream

Milk is heavier than cream. Cream in milk rises to the surface because it is composed of infinitesimal drops of oil and fat which are lighter than the remainder of the milk. The rising of cream is not at first apparent because the drops are very small and they come up slowly.

"Licking Cub Into Shape"

The phrase "licking a young cub into shape," may appear modern, yet a Twelfth century bestiary gives a vivid illustration of the process, for the bears' offspring are said to be born shapeless lumps, and then molded into form by their mother's tongue.

MILLBURN

Fish of Many Names

A certain fish in some states may be called a large-mouthed bass, but in other states the same fish will be called a green bass, a chub, a trout, a Welshman, a cow bass, a rock bass, a yellow bass, white bass, white salmon, and white trout. Altogether this fish is called by 40 different names.

Boys First Phone Operators

The first operators of the telephone switchboard installed in New Haven, Conn., in 1878, were boys. Ahoy-ahoy was used instead of the customary hello.
